Social Studies Teachers Make Real-Life Connections

Throughout our observations in Social Studies classrooms in APS we have been impressed with how our educators utilize their classroom instruction to make relevant and meaningful connections to content. Pictured above you see an image from ATS, where students are applying democratic principles through Student Council Elections. This process directly parallels the elections that occurred in November, making the curricular connection to real-life events evident. Below you see students making cross-curricular connections.

A typical home in Colonial Virginia was 30 feet long and 20 feet wide. Is that bigger or smaller than our classroom? 🗺️👤

A NOTE FROM THE SOCIAL STUDIES OFFICE

Thank you for the work that you have done so far this academic school year to support student learning. We have been so grateful to have been able to visit so many classrooms and see such formative work. We hope that you take advantage of the break ahead, as YOU are essential to the success of our students.

Gender, Sexual Identity, and the Constitution

This seminar will take place March 22-24, 2019 at James Madison's Montpelier

This timely seminar will debate (among other things):

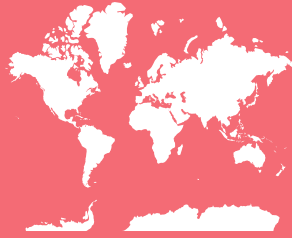

- Why gender is a constitutional subject
- The relationship between women's subordination and other problems that are approached by enforcing constitutional gender equality
- How constitutional gender equality disrupts and entrenches gender-differentiated roles in biological and social reproduction
- The future of constitutional gender equality, in light of the constitutional protection of sexual identity

Our guest scholar will be Julie Suk, dean for master's programs and professor of Sociology at The Graduate Center at the City University of New York. We will also have a special guest, Stephanie Henneva-Vaucheza, professor of Comparative Constitutional Law from the University of Paris Ouest Nanterre who is a specialist on gender and constitutions in Europe.

We will accept teachers starting January 2, 2019, so please apply (or pass on the opportunity) to your colleagues! The application process is easy. Please visit the seminar page Gender, Sexual Identity, and the Constitution, and click the "Apply" button.
